VANCOUVER, B. C.

My clouded sunshine; - June 11th, 1921.

What seems to be the matter with my darling girl? Why should the thought of the fair City of Vancouver depress you? My dear girl, you are wrong! If you will think over the matter you will find it is not the thought of being away from home which depresses you, but the high tension at which you have been working, or atmospheric conditions, or worry about the future, or ^{perhaps} all combined. Why should you, my ideal, get such moods? You are in the golden days of life, & your future visions are, I hope, most pleasant. I am glad you tell me how you feel, but surely, being the sensible girl you are, you should have no difficulty to adapt yourself to new surroundings. I know it is not your lack of confidence in me that makes you feel so unpleasant. Brighten up, dear heart, & nurse only cheerful thoughts. Think only of the beautiful & harmony in nature. Be determined to instantly dismiss all depressing thoughts, & I trust, my precious pearl, you will let me know ~~how~~ what progress you make.

I would not be doing you justice were I to conceal my feelings at this moment.
 I want to take the next train East to thoroughly investigate the cause, & perhaps would do so, had I not heeded the warning you gave me some time ago not to take such a rash step. If there is anything I can do to relieve those moods, please let me know, as I feel responsible ^{for them} to some extent. Is it because you feel you do not understand me, or that our temperaments are unlike? ^{Even} ~~that~~ with your moods & whims, I cannot be expected to divorce you: so what are you going to do?

If I can "help" you as you suggest, it would be my most pleasant undertaking to do so; but pray, dear one, tell me how!

I want to write more, but shall not do so until I hear again from you on Monday.

Your anxious boy,
 Morris.
