

An answer to a question set out in a letter dated 7th December, without prejudice or responsibility upon the part of the writer:

of the letter above referred to
Is the writer entitled to the expenses to which he was put? See below

Remarks:

Three additional factors must be taken into consideration before expressing an opinion. It was unusual in that, as a co-operative partnership one would expect every effort would be made to avoid spoiling a holiday of one of the members and it therefore is to be presumed that the return of the absent partner was of some special value to the Co, either to make an additional profit or to save it from an unforeseen expense. In other words the return, if for the benefit of all but at the expense of in giving up his regular vacation period (after expend-ing money on it, an expense would seem to have been incurred), of one seems to call for compensation—under other conditions it might not E. W. M.
