Dearest,

If the soul of wit is brevity, then your most darling note was the wittiest letter ever written. Do you notice that my typing is becoming more rotten every day, I just received a most luscious bawling out from the chief clerk for incorrect spelling, he told me that if it happened again that they were going to send me to school to learn how to spell all over again. Darling I think so much of you that the rest seems so insignificant and paltry that I don't bother thinking of ~~it~~ it. Do you know Ann that I got a letter from Goldstone (by golly you do I told you yesterday) now I know that I am getting absent minded. Darling I love you so much, that the sooner we are married the sooner I will be pleased, so come and talk it over with Mother and your folks and see what they ~~xx~~ say. The sooner the better. How about you.

Oh gee, oh gosh, oh golly, the photographs ~~were~~ just dandy especially yours, you look so sweet and demure that I missed you more than ever. Please darling hurry up and come to Victoria I miss you so much. Dad and Mother are just as anxious as I am, if that were possible, I don't think so.

Well darling, what is new in Vancouver there is absolutely nothing in this neck of the woods.

Dearest light of my heart there is nothing more that

I can think of at the moment except to say I love you (I had so many interruptions I had to take this out of the machine love to the family from mother Dad & myself

until the ocean turns into spring ale

I love you

Ralph
