

February 14, 1933.

Darling,

Your most adorable letter to "that fellow" arrived in the office this morning a few minutes after I did, and every word made me thrill with real happiness.

I love you dearly, and believe it or not, I miss you plenty. Darling I have now "burned my bridges" by handing in my resignation to our estimable honorary secretary, Mr. N.C. Levin. The dear man asked me to call a special executive committee meeting for Thursday night, to discuss "what's to be done now". He has actually suggested that an Executive Director may be engaged. If I had known that I was as valuable as all this to the institution, I might have demanded a raise in salary. But the discovery has come too late, and I feel most happy about everything.

Darling, I must rush on to more work. I love you with all my heart.

Give my love to your darling mother and dear dad.

In much haste, my darling,

Ann
