SYNOPSIS:--Young Marlow, a somewhat unwilling suitor for the hand of Kate Hardcastle, none of whose family he has ever seen, comes from London to make the proposal. He and his friend Hastings lose their way and are directed by Kate's mischeivous half-brother to the Hardcastle mansion, which he tells them is the best Inn thereabouts. This leads to considerable confusion and astonishment, each party being unable to explain the conduct of the others; Hardcastle finds his guests unaccountably insolent; they find him too familiar. To cap the climax, Marlow takes his future bride for the barmaid. This mistake Miss Hardcastle exploits for her own purposes. Meanwhile other exciting events -- a jewel robbery, and an elopement -- are going forward.
